AN EVENING WITH THE POETS.

THE POSITION OF MISS ADAH ISAACS MENKEN. We were certainly disappointed, although we cannot eay surprised, to find in the person of the performer at Hope Chapel, last evening, another female apologist. That woman is an immemorial martyr to the base passions of man; that at all periods she has been wantonly deprived of every right bestowed upon her by impartial Heaven-even of the right of speech; that society has set a face of stone against her, and that she bas universally been left out in the cold, is a fact fully admitted, and faithfully deplored, we are cheerfully certain, by a majority of our fellow-men. In humiliation of spirit they accuse themselves of blackest treachery and cruelty. The wasted forms of their victims rice reproachful before them. But as men, they likewise feel, it is in them, and what are they going to do about it? Shall they be dragged forever to the funeral pile of public execration? Shall they be constantly confronted with the ghastly shape of the historical feminine martyr? Is it not enough that nearly every man, arrived at years of maturity, has one or more private skeletons in his house, that he should be personally implicated in the terrible fate of the periodical Voice of the Sex-the irrepressible representative of Eve parsued by the serpent?

Accustomed as all of us are to baving the apple thrown violently at our miserable head-and still smarting from the righteons, although perhaps injudicious, peppering in that fruit lately inflicted by Mrs Gurney, few suspected that under the pleasant guise of an "Evening With the Poets," Miss Adah Isaacs Menken proposed martyrdom, seasoned albeit, with magnanimity-that amid the flowers of fancy which should be summoned to bloom in Hope Chapel last evening, by that arch " interpreter of the Bards," was destined to appear the distressing head of the serpent that really is responsible for all the present mischief between man and woman? Recognizing genins as the only true interpreter of genius, many of those fifty or perhaps sixty odd who turned from the giddy Psychomantheum of Professor Anderson to the humbler shrine of Miss Menken, were actunied by a sincere derire to see the meed of appreciation and sympathy bestowed by her upon the divine and immortal conceptions of the great poets, and beneath this craving of the nature after genius wa perhaps the wish to see the interpreter define her position. Let us confess that the cry of our fallen, although not wholly guilty, na ure, was for such a definition. And we submit to a tribunal of the loveliest and most gracious of our readers whether we were not justified to look out for something sharp and spicy by a poster inscribed, with declamatery type, "The Age of Irre-"pressibles! Adah Isaacs Menken will Define her "Position," &c,-especially when the reflection is added that to this name a few months since was affixed that of a Champion equally distinguished then as now, although far away from Jones's Wood and the loved shades of the Malta, while since the restoration of that gentleman there has been no cause apparent to the world why the euphoneous appellation should be

But the stern fate of our faithless sex met us at the very threshold of the Coapel of Hope. The motto of the programme of an "Evening With the Poets," more carefully printed than the rest of the paper, (in which for "Trial scene" could be read "Final scene," and Edgar H. Poe stood steadily for another honored name), was this:

I read and write for those men and women wh do not reject religion—that sole sanctifier of man—and who do not turn away from the light of goodness wherever it may be found, and for those who nonor a woman for her purity of motives, her aspirations, and her sufferings, wherever she may be found."

And conscious guilt stole over the countenance of every reading and pondering man; and several unusually abandoned monsters did actually ' turn away from the light of goodness" before that light began to fairly shine, and stung with shame at the thought that in the whole course of their lives they had never "honored a woman for her purity of motives, her aspirations, and her sufferings," fled incontinently from the retribution that was certain to come, sooner or later, in the "Evening with the Poets."

But it was not until all the bards of the occasion had been interpreted, that Miss Menken defined her position. The motto justly prefigured the doom of her gallant little band of listeners-galiant enough to applaud almost every utterance, as some dreadful beasts are said to salivate and soften their prey before tearing to pieces and devouring it. It was the old story of the hard struggle up the hill of life, in this instance against extraordinary grammatical obstacles, and amid roaring lions, and a few (this heart knows how few !) friends. Once more we were called upon to witness the struggle of a heart. cast off the corroding chains of malice and envy, and to stand regenerated and redeemed. Once more we were assured that in this desperate, although favorite piece of business, it is not necessary to throw aside woman's "garb or spirit," and assume the form of the Amazon. Once more was put to us the earnest in quiry whether this woman should not be permitted to be a noble and pure person, without further interruption? And, as always before, the "position" was that of a female forsaken of the world, and throwing herself upon the Judge up above, who will judge aright. And these "few friends" (scarcely included in the very limited company then present), might take out of Court the assurance that their rest would be CONSCLIDATION OF WIDE-AWARE CLUBS, -As the I Isaacs Menken had seen fit, instead of protrading upon the public sufferings and wrongs in which they can't be expected to chare, what with all their own, to define her position as a clever, entertaining mournfully in that hall of fond despair would have changed to a lively and comfortable lay. For Miss Menken has clever and entertaining qualities. Her person, when arrayed in simple and girlish white, is an agreeable object of contemplation; her features are often lighted with the beauty of sensibility. The tones of her voice are often plaintive and full of melody. Her elecution never shocks by its violence. Her speaking is natural, and so has the chance to be right and good. We may speak of the entire recitation of Poe's wonderful poem, "The Bells," as a rare dramatic embodiment of a very difficult spirit; and lines of the Raven and lines of Shakespeare were given with an appreciative earnestness that should stir the most sensitive audience.

And if Miss Adah Isaacs Menken might be contented to cherish such "aspirations" only as reach toward eminence, success, and honor in the profession she seems finally to have adopted, we might suggest, with a single feeling of respect for and sympathy with the efforts of man or woman to do the best by the talent committed, that before these aspirations can be fully realized, there must be a great amount of hard, patient, and perhaps "suffering" study; that the rude habit acquired in Bowery and blue fire practice must be abandened for the graceful unconsciousness of the drawing-room lady; that our noble English language must be pursued with a hearty determination to be at least equal to the average free-school pupil in the arts of pronunciation and the proper relation of substantives with verbs; that the conceptions of the "Bards" must be well learned by the letter before they can be fairly "interpreted" by the spirit, and that a stern sense of duty must forever forbid emendations of the accepted text of authors, living or dead, a knowledge of which has been much extended by the rapid multiplication of free libraries and cheap editions. All this done, steadily and thoroughly, instead of "the chains of malice, o envy," who can say that the chaplets of pride and ac miration that adorned a Fenny Kemble may not b bound about Miss Adah Isaacs Menken?

The stock market was quire tame at the First Board. This was availed of by the Bears on the second call, to mark down prices, and the market ras rather dull at the close. The firmest stocks of the day were New York Central, Michigan Central, Hudson River, and Toledo; but the most active business was in Illinois Central, and Galena. Immediately after the adjournment prices became firmer and after the receipt of the foreign news the market was decidedly better. The improvement continued through the Second Board, and the market was a eady at the close. The most important advance was in Illinois Central, which, from 853 in the morning, went up to 87, but was a fraction lower at the close. This was partly owing to the advance in England reported by the steamer. Erie sold as high as 281, but was afterward down at 287 @281. The items of business intelligence come in favorably from all quarters, not only in regard to the great crops of the West, but as to the foreign demand for our surplus breadstuffs. These facts, so strongly confirming the anticipations of hopeful men, give to the Stock Market a firmness beneath the surface, which for ten days has resisted the attacks of the bears. The sta emen s in regard to the business prospects of the New-York Central and Hudson River Roads are very satisfactory; it is estimated that some of the Autumn months of the Central will come near to $1 000 000. which is larger than ever before. The Hadson is doing well for the month, and in September will undoubtedly show a very large increase. The Bond market is comparatively dull, with slight changes. The closing prices were as follows: Virginia 6s, 911 2911; Missouri 6s, 813 @ 814: Canton Company, 20 @ 214 Cumberland Coal, 151@161; Pacific Mail, 781@79; New-York Central Railroad, 84 @841; Erie Railroad, 28) @281; Hudson River Railroad, 58 = 581; Harlem Railroad, 184 = 181; Harlem Railroad Preferred, 471 @ 471; Reading Railroad, 461 @ 461; Michigan Central Railroad, 69 @ 691; Michigan Southern and Northern Indiana Railroad 214 @ 22; Michigan Southern and Northern Indiana Guaranteed, 47 | #47 |; Panama Railroad, 125 w 125 |; Blinois Central Railroad, 86] #87; Galena and Chicago Railroad, 82 7821; Cleveland and Toledo Railroad 47 @ 471; Coicago and Rock Island Railroad, 831 @ 831; Chicago, Burlington, and Quincy Railroad, 901 2 901

The Bank statement of weekly averages contain; no item of ma erial interest. The changes are about what was looked for, alshough a moderate reduction of loans was generally anticipated. The loss of the specie reserve is as small as could be expected. The increase o' loans has undoubtedly arisen from the discounts made for interior corresponding banks who need funds to aid their dealers engaged in fowarding the produce of the West. The deposit line is very steady. The following is a comparative statement of the con-

The foreign news by the North American, according to a brief glimpse given by the telegraph, is of the most favorable chraacter in its bearing upon the commercial interests of this country. The market for cotton is better and more active, and for breadstuffs the story is the same as brought by previous steamers, except that a continuance of unpropitious weather appears to have swakened a greater anxiety in regard to the crops. It is quite evident that Great Britain is to be a arge consumer of our cereal products, and this at a time when the surplus here is so large, is very im portant. The West needs customers only to turn its great harvest into money at good prices, and this result now appears to be insured. Consols are quoted at 934 a 934. We understand that private dispatches quote Illinois Central at 25 P cent discount, and Erie at 26-both showing a decided advance over last prices. We have no accounts in regard to the English Money market, except that which announces a decline in Consols on account of a three million loan lenders to put up the rates of interest, but no important result has yet been obtained. The supply of capital is too la ge for such a movement. On demand loans have been made to-day at 5 & cent but the current ra'es are 51 @6 P cent. Short paper is still scarce, and gres at 5 76 F cent. Lung paper is in fair supply, and goes at 64 w 7 P cent. The New-York Central dividend is now being paid. The immense shipments of produce have brought down the rate of exchange on the East at Chicago to | # cent premium.

The weekly tunnage, as shown by our report, is again quite large, reaching 218,396 tuns, increasing the tunnage of the season by the sources named to 4,706 874 tuns, being a net excess of tunnage by the same lines, to the same time last year, of 535,739 tuns. Three of the sources show a falling off of 96,349 tuns. The Pottsville Miners' Journal says:

The Pottsville Miners' Journal says:

"It is rumored that the Government coal contract has been taken at $3.39 a tun for Black Heath coal, delivered on board the Government steamers. This is a low figure, even lower than the contract awarded last year at $3.25, because the freights are now 15c. a tun higher than they were last year, and will be advanced 15c. $\frac{1}{2}$ tun more after the 1st of September."

The new Board of Directors took possession of the Marietta and Cincinnati Rritroad on Wednesday, and relieved the Trustees of the responsibility. No change has yet been made in the executive management of the road.

The press of business on the Erie Canal is so great that canal-boats which were bought at $1 000 and $1,200 early in the season have been resold for $1,800 to $2,000.

The Chicago Press of Friday says: "To give our readers an idea of the commerce of Chicago this year compared with last, we append the following table, showing the receipts of Wheat and Corn alone in this city for the first half of August, compared with 1859:

The Chacago Press says:

"The Mississippi and Missouri Railroad is making steady and sure progress weatward. The track is laid several miles west of low a City, and the contractor gives assurance that it will be opened to Marengo, thirry niles west of Iowa City, by the middle of Septemer. This town is surrounded by a rich and populous pointon of the State, and the opening of the road to that point will add largely to its business. The rolling stock of the line we learn is already taxed to its attermost capacity, and the strife for cars at the different stations to market the accumulating proceeds of the shundant harvest, has become active and interesting Time and energy will furnish a satisfactory solution to these slight troubles. The next section of the road thirty office between Marengo and Ginnell, is mostly graded, and a large amount of ties are already delivered. It will be completed early in the Winter or Spring of 1861. Grannell is 115 miles west of the Mississippi, leaving, when the road reaches that point, only about 200 miles more to complete it to the Missouri. The importance of the line to our city, and to the country through which it passes ought to secure its completion early in 1862. It could be done if the money could be provided, within the next six months.

The New-Orleans Picayune of Wednesday evening,

The New-Orleans Picayume of Wednesday evening, Aug. 15, says:

"The Persia's advices, received to-day by telegraph, have had a reassuring effect in comæercial circles and business moved along with increasing bucyancy. Capital was abundant, both at Bunk and on the street, and the better grades of paper were in request at a slight improvement in the rates of d scount. Stocks and bonds were inactive throughout, and we did not hear of a transection for the day in this description of sec critics. There was some inquiry for dividend-paying stocks, but buyers and sellers failed to agree upon prices. Exchange continued inquid, and operations were, if anything, further restricted in both foreign and Domestic. Offerings of sterling indicated a marked in crease, and the demand for all classes of bills was but little better than nominal."
